CHATEAU LAURIER

A POEM IN STONE, expressing all the charm and beauty of a Norman stronghold of the medieval period, Chateau Laurier well merits its position as the premier of "Canada's Hotels of Distinction." Graceful and majestic, it stands on the slopes of the hill crowned by the Houses of Parliament of the Nation's capital—a fitting complement to the dignity of these buildings—but suggesting also an atmosphere of genuine comfort, luxury and refinement.

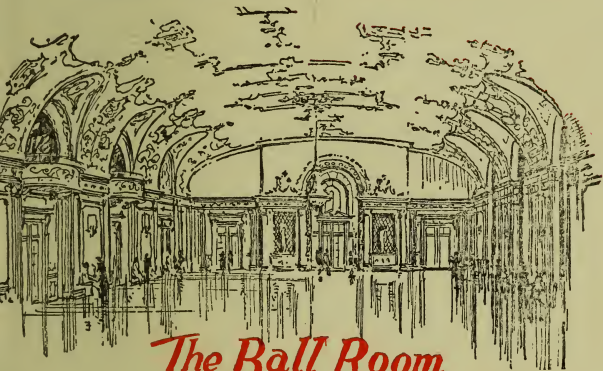

☞ Chateau Laurier is the rendezvous of the world-traveller, statesman, ambassador and tourist. In every detail of its accommodations for a thousand guests, it has been designed to appeal to the most discriminating and to create an unforgettable impression of combined beauty, dignity and hospitality.

☞ Every room is a modern masterpiece of its type. The spacious rotunda exemplifies the best in Elizabethan influence, the lovely colonnades and galleries being for the most part mid-Georgian. The main dining-room is an exquisite creation of purest Adam period in soft tones of green. The ballroom is a dream of enchantment. The Jasper tea room intrigues and fascinates with its gay, colorful, fantastic totem poles, its striking mural decorations, Indian symbols, and its fountain, miniature of a roaring cataract falling into a sparkling lake.

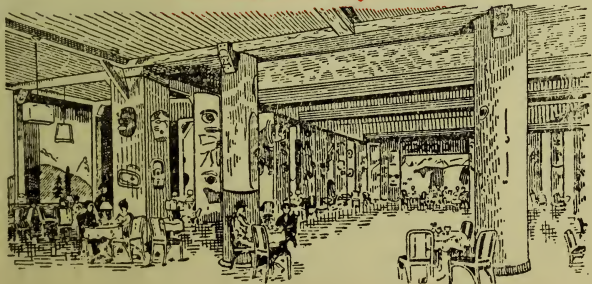

☞ In the personal service to guests—in its excellent cuisine—its entertainment features—its comfort and accommodations for individuals or conventions, Chateau Laurier is unquestionably the dernier mot in hotels.

ONE of the most beautiful cities in Canada, founded in 1826, is everything that the Dominion Capital should be. It has an ideal setting on a picturesque promontory on the south shore of the Ottawa River, at the confluence of the Rideau and Gatineau Rivers.

Among the chief points of interest in the city are the Houses of Parliament, Government House—the home of Canada's Governor-General, Victoria Memorial Museum, the Public Archives, the Royal Mint, the National Gallery and the Government Experimental Farm. Over thirty miles of garden-bordered driveways wind through the city, and eleven lovely parks enhance its beauty.

For conventions, or for the individual tourist or vacationist, Ottawa, the Capital, and Chateau Laurier, the Hotel of Distinction, unite in ideal combination.
